Abstract

A system for generating an Open Library Architecture Delay and Power Calculation Module. The system includes a user interface for generating and submitting requests that specify configurations and types of memories for which Open Library Architecture Delay and Power Calculation Modules are needed. A server is configured to receive the requests and produce Open Library Architecture Delay and Power Calculation Modules in response thereto.